Marketing and Communications

As the Office of University Communications and Marketing, or UCM, continues to expand the University of North Alabama brand throughout the state and region, we also endeavor to be active participants with departments across campus in order to distribute and market programmatic and other information that will continue to build enrollment.

Since our last meeting, UCM has:

- Worked toward an extensive re-design of the UNA Magazine, which will extend the publication date to June. Issues will reflect changes on campus and incorporate news from each of the Colleges.
- Implemented a calendarized social media schedule so as to target specific audiences with messaging across our channels, covering news as well as current events on campus in a timely and engaging way.
- Engaged with the College of Business to publish its strategic report; the project involved writing and design, and it highlights some of the notable programs, faculty, and goals taking place throughout the College.
- Executed a new marketing strategy for the annual UNA Distinguished Events Series that featured Capt. Scott Kelly, who is also an astronaut. Attendance, engagement, and coverage of the event was among the best for this event.
- Engaged with several departments across campus, including the College of Education and Human Sciences, the Honors College, and the Department of Sociology, to implement online marketing campaigns targeting specific audiences in a variety of geographic areas throughout the region.
- Managed the implementation of a Speaker's Bureau in order to engage with outside entities through the use of expert sources on campus. Individuals from UNA's faculty and staff have been encouraged to participate.
- Continued to work toward an overall market analysis with our partners, Tatum Design, of Birmingham. The results will dictate future marketing efforts to demographics across the region.
- Continued to work alongside media outlets of all types – local, regional, and national – in order to further the messaging and branding of the University to the broadest base of constituencies.
